DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless --

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-6, 1-17 and 21-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Radomsky et al. (US 6,211,790).

Regarding claim 1, Radomsky et al. disclose infant and parent matching and security system including all subject matters as follows:

at least one transmitter (30, 32) configured to transmit a signal (34, 36) containing an identification code (as shown in Figure 2; col. 6, lines 6-23); and at least one receiver (20, 21) configured to receive the signal (34, 36) and establish a comparison indication based on comparison of the identification code with a reference code (as shown in Figure 2; col. 6, lines 5-39).

Regarding claim 2, Radomsky et al. disclose that the comparison indication is positive on indicator (38) if the identification code matches said reference code (col. 7, lines 3-23).

Regarding claim 3, Radomsky et al. disclose that the comparison indication is negative on indicator (38) if the identification code does not match said reference code (col. 7, lines 3-23).

Regarding claim 4, Radomsky et al. disclose the receiver comprises memory for storing the reference code (col. 6, lines 3-23).

Regarding claim 5, Radomsky et al. disclose the receiver further including a controller (server, 24) configured to communicate with an indicator (38) based on the comparison of the identification code with the reference code stored in the memory (col. 6, lines 54-67 and col. 7, lines 1-23).

Regarding claim 6, Radomsky et al. disclose the memory being programmable (col. 6, lines 15-20).

Regarding claim 11, refer to claim 1 above.

Regarding claim 12, Radomsky et al. disclose the transmitter being coupled to an identification band (104) being coupled the associated infant (116, as shown in Figure 4).

Regarding claim 13, refer to claim 2 above.

Regarding claim 14, refer to claim 3 above.

Regarding claim 15, refer to claim 4 above.

Regarding claim 16, refer to claim 5 above.

Regarding claim 17, refer to claim 6 above.

Regarding claim 21, refer to claim 1 above, Radomsky et al. disclose transmitters (30, 32) being worn by both mother and infant (as shown in Figure 2).

Regarding claim 22-24, the claimed method steps would have been inherent in the product structure.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 7-10, 18-20 and 25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Radomsky et al. (US 6,211,790).

Regarding claim 7, Radomsky et al. disclose the instant claimed invention except for: a user interface configured to program the memory. It would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use a user interface to program the memory for the purpose of enabling data entry to the database.

Regarding claims 8-9, Radomsky et al. disclose the instant claimed invention except for: the receiver being mounted to a specific fixed structure. Since Radomsky et al. disclose the receiver(s) can be located within various locations (col. 5, lines 28-41). It would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to locate the receiver on a fixed structure/wall for the purpose of ensuring correct positioning of the receiver(s).

Regarding claim 10, Radomsky et al. disclose the instant claimed invention except for: the reference code being the same as the identification code. It would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have the reference code be the same as the identification code for the purpose of ensuring proper matching.

Regarding claim 18, refer to claim 7 above.

Regarding claims 19-20, refer to claims 8-9 above.

Regarding claim 25, Radomsky et al. disclose the instant claimed invention except for: the comparison step being done more than once before establishing comparison indication. It would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to compare the data more than once to verify the accuracy thereof.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Crimmins et al. (US 5,621,384);

Stokes (US 5,512,879); and Vercellotti et al. (US 5,317,309).
